For your highest priority issue, why is it your highest and how would you address it?

Catherine Blakespear (D)

Matt Gunderson (R)

As the only candidate in this race who is 100% pro-choice, I am proudly endorsed by Planned Parenthood Action Fund and NARAL Pro-Choice California. I will always stand in support of a woman’s right to a safe, legal abortion. I am also the only candidate who supports Prop 1, which will enshrine a woman’s right to choose into the state constitution.

My priorities are affordability, public safety, homelessness, protecting local control, and making our state more business friendly. I will fight new taxes, pass a tax cut for the middle class, fully fund law enforcement, enact a fair and firm homeless plan, and fight efforts to create one-size-fits-all solutions for California’s challenges.

For the record, all of these things are important, but the way I ranked the issues is based on what I see as the things that demand the most attention from the state Legislature right now. I think immigration is largely a federal issue, so it is not in a state senator’s purview.

All of these issues are high priority. We deserve legislators who will spend all of their time making sure life in California is affordable, safe, and simple. Every single one of the issues outlined here has a role to play in accomplishing that goal.
